

Shrimp Boats

Shrimp boats catch shrimp in nets. Each morning the men jump onto the shrimp boat. The nets are still damp from the day before. They smell like shrimp and the sea.

The ride out to sea can be bumpy. The men dump the nets into the water. Then the shrimp boat drags the nets to catch the shrimp. They hope that they will catch lots of plump shrimp.

When the nets are full, the men dump the shrimp onto the ship. The shrimp land with a loud thump. The men will put the shrimp into boxes and sell them.

People buy the shrimp at the market. They take the shrimp home. Then they cook the shrimp until they are pink and hot. Big, plump shrimp make a fine meal!
